CREAMY TRIPPED OUT GARAGE-PUNK

BIOGRAPHY

BREWED IN BRIGHTON, MOODY GOODS DEAL IN "COUNTERFEIT ROCK N' ROLL PSYCHED OUT GARAGE PUNK"!! LOUD, FAST AND FUELLED BY EQUAL PARTS SWAGGER, GRIT AND MELODY. THEIR SOUND CRASHES TOGETHER HIGH-VELOCITY GARAGE ROCK, LATE '70S PUNK, AND FULL-THROTTLE ROCK'N'ROLL ENERGY, DRAWING COMPARISONS TO EVERYTHING FROM DEAD BOYS AND THE HEARTBREAKERS TO D.O.A., HOT SNAKES AND AUSTRALIA'S CURRENT PUNK EXPLOSION.

Their debut LP Southern Lights, released via Boss Tuneage Records (UK, EUR, JPN) and Outhouse Records (CAN), has been described as "an adrenaline fuelled rockin', punkin', foot tappin', head bangin' delight" packed with "drive and fun" but elevated by the depth and catchiness of the songwriting. Reviewers have praised the band's "amped up Garage Rock sound" and "beefy Punk Rock attitude," built for sweaty back-room gigs, overflowing pubs, skatepark parties and beer-soaked singalongs.

Moody Goods hit the ground running almost immediately after forming, quickly taking their chaotic live show from Brighton pubs to a tour across British Columbia, Canada — playing rowdy DIY venues, skatepark parties and becoming the first UK band to play several of the stops along the way. Whether packed into the corner of a tiny pub or tearing through a festival slot, the band's reputation has grown through raw, high-energy performances that celebrate the spirit of punk without taking themselves too seriously.

Recorded with producer Dave Draper at The Old Cider Press studio in Pershore, Southern Lights took shape over scattered sessions squeezed between work, family life and other musical projects. The result is an album that balances reckless energy with hooks, heart and a genuine love for loud guitars with a psyche edge.

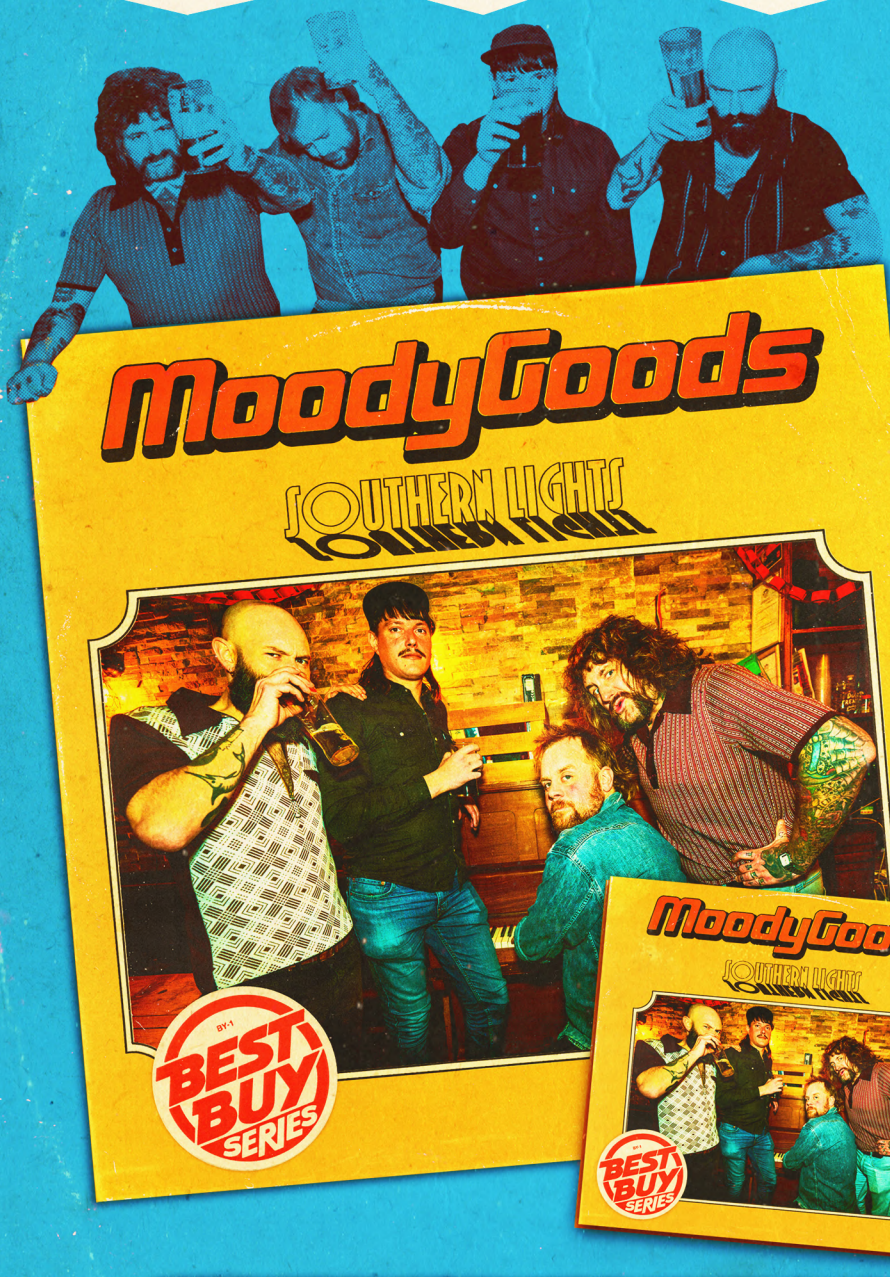

At its core, Moody Goods is four friends making the kind of music they love: fast, loud, melodic rock'n'roll designed to give people "a half hour break from reality." With more touring plans brewing and a growing reputation on both sides of the Atlantic, Moody Goods are proving that gritty DIY punk rock is still very much alive — and still best experienced with a warm pint in hand and a dangerously overloaded PA system nearby..

With their debut album Southern Lights, Moody Goods bring excitement, musicianship and joy into focus as they whirl you away into a hazy world of saturated sounds.

Back of Beyond a grand sonic landscape to welcome you to the band's turf. The thick and growling bass punctuated with thumping drums is nicely filled out with some crispy, trippy guitars.

Break Free is a personal favourite of mine. It's an example that shows what happens when you let talented musicians absolutely RiP. Just a joy to listen to. Next they slow things down a bit with the first single, Treacle Pits. This tune is one example of many songs where their irregular time signatures blend so well with the Status Quo and modern Aussie punk influences showing off the musicianship at work. You can hear them having so much fun together.

Heat Keeps Coming drips with attitude and the Goods' personalities shine through, effortlessly cool and inviting you to join their crew.

CDS leans even further into the psychedelic side of their sound. It's been pulling the strings of their sound like a puppet but now it's centre stage. Each new turn of the track expands what is often considered a cookie cutter genre into a psychedelic odyssey. I was really impressed with this track and I'm excited to tune in and drop out with it in future. The distorting flanger outro made me think of the warped sounds of electric wizard but with sizzling hard rock guitars.

Sunshine State continues the rude habit of Moody Goods to get you thinking you know where they're going with a song and then pulling the rug out from under you.

Ties That Bind and Pineapple Straight feel like the band in absolute flow state. The boys are tight as fuck and every beat and swerve of the track they are locked in together. I think they say it best at the end of Pineapple Straight when they tell you to fuck off... they've earned it, you see.

Jeans and T-shirt starts with a nice change of pace before blasting you back into the rip roaring energy that defines this band. I'm excited that they've managed to capture the existential whiplash you get watching them live, realising that no matter how shit things might be you can spread joy and love with talent, practice and some massive amps.

Bricklayer's Laptop serves as a fantastic outro to what is a masterfully crafted album. It feels like a concept album where the music is a motorbike you're riding into the desert, taking the scenic route through space, time, passing far out galaxies and taking its foot off the accelerator only to let you catch your breath and not fall off dizzy.

If this is the debut god knows what these bastards are capable of in the future but I'll be there punching the air and beaming ear to ear!
